

PREFACE

Dear Reader, you are browsing the first issue of the twelfth volume of TNTeF – Interdisciplinary eJournal of Gender Studies. The Spring issue is traditionally a selection of papers delivered at the annual gender and sexuality conference organized the previous fall by TNT, the Gender Studies Research Group, University of Szeged. However, due to Covid-19, we had to cancel one year and organize the 16th Conference in 2021. Even if online, we were, nevertheless, able to meet again! The title of the conference was Possibilities of Resistance and Cooperation. Out of the twenty-five presentations, we have selected six contributions, which were reworked for publication in the current issue. All contributions are first publications.

For those readers interested in the changes of the popularity of the journal, as well as for historic record and comparative information, the current counter of the journal's homepage reads 66.377 – not including direct access to the individual contributions. We are grateful for your ongoing interest!

This issue continues our tradition of providing a transnational and diverse representation of the achievements in the various disciplinary fields of feminist scholarship. We are particularly happy about the balanced presence of humanities and social sciences. We happily recommend in particular the article “I want to live by all means!’ Possibilities of Resistance and Cooperation in Two Hungarian Holocaust Narratives” by Anna Kérchy, which won the Audience Award for the best talk – the Wonder Woman fridge magnet that evokes the 1941 American Comics figure. We are proud to know that the Award is displayed on the fridge belonging to one of our colleagues in TNT, the Research Group. On behalf of the Editorial Board, we extend our heart-felt congratulations!

We would also like to announce a change in the NEWS column. Beginning with this issue, we shall include only free access to journals, special issues, or books. We do not include CFPs for publications or conferences, assuming that everyone should follow those in their respective fields of scholarship in languages they speak.

Enjoy reading the issue!
